

BARWICK, Roy William

Born: February 1, 1952, Henfield, West Sussex, England.

The star of the Iwade Training Scheme in 1974, Roy had tried his hand at speedway in the late 1960s before concentrating on a career in grass tracking but decided to give the shale another try and his outings at the Kent track gave him the opportunity of rides at Crayford when the London Road side entered the National League for 1975. He broke into the side in July as the management tried various juniors at the bottom end of the side but his stay in the team was short and he managed just five appearances before the end of the season. He would have expected to win a more regular place in 1976 but found the going even tougher and made just one appearance before drifting out of the sport.
